

CONTENTS

CHAPTER	PAGE	CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Introduction . . . . .	1	Heredity and learning of ex-
Experimental variables . . . . .	3	pression . . . . .	128
Qualitative and quantitative experiments . . . . .	6	6 Emotion II: Energetics . . . . .	133
2 Reaction time . . . . .	8	The activation mechanisms . . . . .	133
Historical sketch . . . . .	10	Electrical skin conductance . . . . .	137
Apparatus . . . . .	11	Psychological determiners of
Dependence on the stimulus . . . . .	16	skin conductance . . . . .	144
Dependence on the organism . . . . .	27	Significance for psychology . . . . .	158
Correlations and uses . . . . .	39	7 Emotion III: Other bodily
3 Association . . . . .	43	changes . . . . .	160
Historical background . . . . .	43	Circulation . . . . .	160
Methods . . . . .	46	Respiration . . . . .	168
Commonness of response words . . . . .	50	Muscular tension . . . . .	173
Classification . . . . .	52	Other changes and indices . . . . .	179
Associative reaction time . . . . .	56	Patterns of activation . . . . .	181
Detective and diagnostic uses . . . . .	66	Lie detection . . . . .	185
4 Attention . . . . .	72	8 Psychophysics I: The determi-
Determiners of attention . . . . .	74	nation of thresholds . . . . .	192
Shifts and fluctuations . . . . .	76	The Method of Limits . . . . .	196
Distraction . . . . .	84	The Method of Average Error . . . . .	199
Doing two things at once . . . . .	87	Frequency methods . . . . .	200
Span of attention or of appre-		The nature of thresholds . . . . .	219
hension . . . . .	90	Thresholds and Weber's Law . . . . .	221
5 Emotion I: Expressive move-		Constant errors and series ef-
ments . . . . .	107	fects . . . . .	225
Activation theory . . . . .	108	9 Psychophysics II: Scaling
Facial expression . . . . .	111	methods . . . . .	234
Vocal expression . . . . .	121	Scales based on liminal differ-
Primary dimensions of facial		ences . . . . .	235
expression . . . . .	124	Fractionation methods . . . . .	238

x CONTENTS

CHAPTER	PAGE	CHAPTER	PAGE
		The Method of Equal Sense
		Distances . . . . .	246
		Paired Comparison . . . . .	252
		The Ranking Method . . . . .	257
		The use of reaction time for scaling . . . . .	261
10	The cutaneous senses . . . . .	267
	Sensory nerve conduction . . . . .	268
	Delimitation of the cutaneous senses . . . . .	273
	Adaptation of the skin senses . . . . .	286
	Cutaneous perception . . . . .	293
11	The chemical senses . . . . .	297
	Taste . . . . .	298
	Smell . . . . .	304
	Olfactory thresholds . . . . .	312
	Odor stimuli . . . . .	318
12	Audition . . . . .	323
	The cochlea and auditory nerve . . . . .	325
	Auditory theories . . . . .	327
	The dimensions of hearing . . . . .	330
	Combinations of simple tones . . . . .	338
	Aural inadequacies . . . . .	342
	Deafness . . . . .	346
	Auditory space perception . . . . .	349
13	Vision . . . . .	362
	The visual stimulus . . . . .	362
	Rod and cone vision . . . . .	365
	Light and dark adaptation . . . . .	367
	Temporal and spatial factors . . . . .	373
	Brightness . . . . .	378
	Visual acuity . . . . .	382
	Color vision . . . . .	387
	Binocular vision . . . . .	397
14	The perception of form . . . . .	403
	Figure and ground . . . . .	403
	Perceptual units . . . . .	408
	Contour . . . . .	411
	Masking of figures . . . . .	413
		Proportion as a characteristic of shape . . . . .	416
		The geometrical illusions . . . . .	417
		Figural aftereffects . . . . .	423
15	Perception of color . . . . .	428
	Problems in color perception . . . . .	428
	Normal conditions of illumination . . . . .	433
	Deceptive indications of illumination . . . . .	441
	Field factors . . . . .	444
	Adaptation . . . . .	447
	Contrast . . . . .	449
16	Visual depth perception . . . . .	455
	Possible cues of depth . . . . .	456
	The stereoscope and stereoscopic vision . . . . .	465
	Accuracy of depth perception . . . . .	469
	Accommodation and convergence . . . . .	475
	The relationship between size and distance . . . . .	480
	Perception of objects . . . . .	487
17	Eye movements in relation to perception . . . . .	492
	Methods of observing and recording eye movements . . . . .	493
	Fixation and associated eye movements . . . . .	497
	Eye movements in reading . . . . .	504
	Pursuit movements and the perception of motion . . . . .	510
	Compensatory eye movements . . . . .	517
	Orientation in space . . . . .	523
18	Learning: Introductory survey . . . . .	528
	General scheme of an experiment in learning . . . . .	530
	Purpose and design of learning experiments . . . . .	539

CONTENTS xi

CHAPTER	PAGE	CHAPTER	PAGE
19 Conditioning . . . . .	541	Materials used in memory ex-
Pavlov's conditional reflex . . . . .	541	periments . . . . .	701
The nature of reinforcement . . . . .	545	Memorizing . . . . .	703
The problem of extinction . . . . .	557	The memorizing process . . . . .	707
Time relations . . . . .	565	Recall . . . . .	718
Attitudinal and "volitional"		Recognition . . . . .	722
factors . . . . .	572	Retention . . . . .	724
Generalization and discrimina-		Factors affecting the speed of
tion . . . . .	576	forgetting . . . . .	728
20 Discrimination learning . . . . .	582	24 Transfer and interference . . . . .	733
Discrimination without direct		Design of transfer experiments	735
comparison . . . . .	585	Cross education . . . . .	738
What are the effective cues in		Memory training . . . . .	743
successful discrimination? . . . . .	589	Training in observation . . . . .	746
"VTE—vicarious trial and		Transfer in maze learning . . . . .	748
error" . . . . .	599	Transfer in terms of stimulus
The "delayed reaction" . . . . .	604	and response . . . . .	751
Cue learning by human sub-		Retroaction . . . . .	761
jects . . . . .	608	Theories of retention (or of
21 Maze learning . . . . .	614	forgetting) . . . . .	767
Sensory cues in maze learning	615	25 Economy in learning and per-
The maze pattern as a factor		formance . . . . .	779
in learning . . . . .	618	Recitation as an aid in learning	779
Some matters of technique . . . . .	624	Whole versus part learning . . . . .	782
What is learned in the maze? . . . . .	626	Massed versus spaced (or "dis-
How the maze is learned . . . . .	635	tributed") learning . . . . .	786
Human maze learning . . . . .	646	Reminiscence . . . . .	794
22 Motivation in learning and		Work and fatigue . . . . .	798
performance . . . . .	655	Efficient acquisition of a skill . . . . .	809
Factors in performance . . . . .	655	26 Problem solving: thinking . . . . .	814
Drive and incentive . . . . .	657	Process-tracing experiments . . . . .	815
Negative drives and incentives	668	Problem solution as related to
Secondary incentives . . . . .	679	transfer . . . . .	825
Nonorganic primary drives and		Set as a factor in problem solv-
incentives . . . . .	683	ing . . . . .	830
Human drives and incentives . . . . .	685	Reasoning as the utilization of
23 Memory . . . . .	695	information . . . . .	841
Experimental methods for the		Bibliographical Index of Authors . . . . .	849 study of memory . . . . .	695	Subject Index . . . . .	910