

contents

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	v
INTRODUCTION	1
An Overview of the Population Field	7
Interdisciplinary Approaches to Popula- tion Problems	8
Demography and Sociology	9
Family Planning Programs	13
Population Theories	17
Population Policies	21
The question of desired social and     individual goals	22
The relationship of population to     other variables	22
Means for implementing population     policies	25
The interaction of means and ends	26
Psychological Factors in Population Research:
A Selective Review	29
Fertility Surveys and KAP Studies	30
Studies of Family Interaction and Fertility	40
Persuasive Communications: Concepts, Theories, and Experiments	48

	Contraception, Sterilization, and Abortion: Psychological Factors in Acceptance and Use	52
	Psychological Studies of Attitudes, Values, and Motivations Related to the Desire for Children	58
	Modernity and Fertility	69
	Psychological Consequences of Family Size and Population Density	72
	Psychological Measurement and Research Designs	75
Contexts for Future Research and Action
	Conceptual Models for Variables Related to Fertility	80
	Focal Problems for Psychological Research	89
	Adaptation of psychological assessment methods to population problems	90
	Immediate applications of psychological knowledge and techniques	94
	Basic studies to meet long-term needs	104
The Development of Psychology and Population:
	A Need for Programs and Commitments	119
Appendix
	Selected Bibliographies in Population	127
	REFERENCES	129
	INDEX	145